

AMERICAN INDIAN AND INDIGENOUS STUDIES PROGRAM

The American Indian & Indigenous Studies Program is dedicated to fostering excellence in education, scholarship, leadership, and support for students, staff, and faculty at the university. While serving the entire university community, the program prioritizes assisting and supporting American Indian and Indigenous students in their academic pursuits. Beyond campus, the American Indian & Indigenous Studies Program provides consultation and services to local, state, and national organizations, strengthening connections between academia and Indigenous communities.

As a leader in American Indian and Indigenous studies, the program supports course development, interdisciplinary scholarship, and research that centers Indigenous knowledge and perspectives. Additionally, the American Indian & Indigenous Studies Program serves as a resource hub for individuals interested in Indigenous cultures, histories, and contemporary issues, offering guidance, events, and academic opportunities that promote deeper engagement with Indigenous communities.
